RUM RUNNERS BLAMED IN DEATH OF RALPH P. FOX

Former Resident Dies Of Wounds Received In Battle With Bootleggers At Brownsville.

Ralph Paul Fox, 30, member of a coal and iron company's police force at Brownsville, suffered fatal pistol wounds in a gun fight with two alleged bootleggers, according to information received Thursday afternoon by his father, C. A. Fox, West street.

Fox was the second officer to die after receiving pistol shot wounds in the battle with the alleged rum runners, Lewis A. Knapp, 31, having died a short time after the affair.

The shooting occurred at Deno, near Brownsville, last Monday, and Fox died at Brownsville late Wednesday afternoon.

The officer's father, a former member of the Gettysburg police force, was notified of the tragedy late Thursday and today was making preparations to go to Brownsville to attend the funeral services.

According to reports from Brownsville, the alleged bootleggers responsible for the two deaths are still at large, although police of every town and city in western Pennsylvania are on the lookout for the pair.

The men, who shot down the two officers, were about to be stopped in an automobile for examination of its contents, the coal and iron police believing it to contain a consignment of liquor.

Fox was a former member of the state police force, having joined the constabulary September 2, 1916.

He was married two years ago and is survived by his wife, his father here and his mother and two sisters residing at Monessen.

Funeral services will be held at Brownsville Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, followed by interment there.

3 SHOWS WILL REMAIN OPEN

(By Associated Press.)
New York, Feb. 11.—Broadway had lost its worries today, at least for a time, with temporary injunctions prohibiting interference with three plays, first objectives on the official house cleaning of the stage, in effect.

Stage authorities greeted officials "thou shalt not" with the claim that the flicker bright light district is reforming itself. Stage nudity is losing favor, revue producers say, and draped figures are returning to popularity.

Revue and night clubs which present risque entertainment, however, were also placed under a police ban today when Acting Mayor McKee gave orders that places featuring nudity to an extent which police might consider indecent should be raided.

Dispute Wage For Entombed Miners

(By Associated Press.)
Hazleton, Feb. 11.—If a man is entombed in a coal mine for eight days, is he entitled to pay for two shifts of eight hours or three shifts?

This question has caused a dispute between the United Mine Workers and the Lehigh Valley Coal company. It arose as a result of the entombment for eight days of five miners in the Tom Hicken colliery by a flood last November.

The men were rescued Thanksgiving evening. Andrew Matthey, district president of the mine workers, announced that the men had been given double time for the days they were in the mine. Matthey maintained that the men are entitled to 24 hour shifts.

Dr. Floyd W. Tomkins Strikes At Egotism and Pleads for Renewed Simplicity of Faith

Rector of Holy Trinity Episcopal Church, Philadelphia, Tells Students That the Greatest Need of the World Today Is a Spirit of Fellowship and Unity Among Christians.

Deploing all forms of egotism, declaring the greatest need of the present generation to be that of simplicity of faith in God and Christ and expressing the opinion that it was the man or woman "who realized his or her need and who cried out 'what lack I yet?'" who attained success," Dr. Floyd W. Tomkins, rector of Holy Trinity church, Philadelphia, spoke to an over-crowded audience consisting of students from the college, seminary and the academy this morning at Brue Chapel, using as his text the New Testament parable of the two men who went up to the temple to pray.

In opening his address, Doctor Tomkins paid a very delicate tribute to Gettysburg College, stating that there was a "spirit of fellowship and strength in God and Christ and man which goes out from Gettysburg College manifesting itself throughout the entire country," and later adding that "the old world, tired of division, was longing for fellowship." "The great throbbing of today," continued the noted divine, "is for unity. Final and enduring peace can only come through Christian brotherhood, not by laws, not by wars, and not by jealousies. If we want to be at peace with man, we must first be at peace with God."

Daily Prayer Necessary
"Don't neglect morning prayer. There is nothing weak or unmanly in recognizing God. Only by cooperation with God and working with God can we hope for true success. We need God as a solution for our daily problems. We need God in order that we might obtain a vision."

"There are two types of people," said Doctor Tomkins in part, "the optimist and the pessimist. The optimist declares that there is nothing wrong with the world while the pessimist declares the world to be all wrong. Both are wrong. The latter overlooks God and the former overlooks every-day conditions. We must catch a vision of what God wants us to be; we must obtain a dynamic that will make us conscious of our own faults and weaknesses and limitations, yet a dynamic that will motivate us to the fulfillment of God's purpose for our life."

Search For Goodness

"It is a great thing to look for the good in life. See in people their possibilities, not their limitations. We must see something beautiful in everything for beauty is always there. Look and search deeply for it. Hold before the wretched what they may become and not how wretched they are. Every little help you give to others is taken by God and made a part of divine life. Your life should be a joy—an opportunity. Each morning we should wake up and say, 'Hurray, here's another day.'"

In speaking of educational institutions of America Doctor Tomkins remarked that "today we build palaces not for kings but for our children. As Americans we can be proud of our institutions of learning and the wonderful procession of young people who, in ever-growing numbers, are going out into the world with the message of Christ."

"Go along life," concluded Doctor Tomkins, "and do your best. God will make success out of your seeming failures and remember that hard work never killed anyone and that it's a mighty good thing to keep yourself hidden."

Appreciative Audience

Doctor Tomkins held his audience for practically an hour at a point of intense interest after the first few minutes of his address. Throughout a keen sense of humor was displayed with many vivid illustrations humorous, yet affecting.

FISHER FAVORS ELECTION REFORM

Wants Law Changed to Make It Mandatory That Courts Open Ballot Boxes on Demand.

(By Associated Press.)
Harrisburg, Feb. 11.—Governor Fisher today went on record as favoring mandatory opening of ballot boxes. The present law reads that the court "may" upon petition open the boxes and the governor's pronouncement was taken to signify his approval of proposals to change this law to read that the court "shall" open them upon petition.

Discussing proposed election law revision legislation the governor said that the law should protect the vote of the electorate and added that so long as the count is honest there should be no fear of opening ballot boxes.

This was the governor's first definite declaration on the subject since his inaugural address when he went on record as favoring enactment of legislation which would insure the fair count of every ballot.

BILL INTRODUCED TO GIVE HOSPITAL INCREASED FUNDS

Weikert Also Introduces Bills For Addition Of Two Roads In Adams County.

The Annie M. Warner Hospital here would receive $10,000 from the state during the next two years, if a measure, introduced by Edward L. Weikert, Jr., Gettysburg, Adams county representative, is passed at the present session of the legislature.

The hospital appropriation bill is one of five measures sponsored by Adams county's representative, who is serving his first term in the lower branch of the state legislature at Harrisburg. Two of the other measures refer to the addition of certain roads in Adams county to the state's system of hard roads; one to the liability of a person, who maintains a fire hazard on his premises, and the fourth to the compulsory equipping of all schools with fire extinguishers and other fire fighting apparatus.

Bill In Committee
State aid for the Warner Hospital during the last biennium was $4,000, being paid in eight installments of $500 each. The funds thus appropriated must be used for the care and treatment of persons themselves financially unable to pay for hospitalization.

In recent years, the state appropriation has been wholly inadequate for charity work at the hospital, thereby causing a drain on other funds available, hospital authorities point out. The present hospital appropriation measure is in committee at Harrisburg and is likely to be reported out soon for action.

One of the roads in the county, contained in a measure to place it on the state system of highways, is that from Two Taverns on the Baltimore road through Bonneauville, past the Brush Run schoolhouse and emerging on the Lincoln Highway at the home of Frank Hetrick. The other road starts at Biglerville, passes through Table Rock to Hunterstown and emerges on the Lincoln Highway at Brush Run.

Included In Omnibus Bill
The bills in which the two road sections are contained are expected to be contained in an omnibus road measure, similar to the one passed two years ago when approximately 1,200 miles of roads were added to the state's primary and secondary systems.

Merit is seen in the measure introduced by Representative Weikert by which a person, who knowingly maintains a fire hazard on his property, would be responsible for damage done another person's property by a fire which started on the former's premises.

Mr. Weikert said he expects opposition to the measure requiring school boards to equip all of their buildings with fire extinguishers or other fire fighting apparatus. The opposition is expected to grow out of the expense in connection with the purchase of such equipment, he said.

Questionable Magazines to be Barred from Newsstands by Order of Burgess Heiges

Three Publications Are Removed From Newsstand and Warning Has Been Given That Arrests Will Follow If Orders Are Not Obeyed; Chaplin's Divorce Suit Story Banned.

In an effort to keep publications containing pictures of nude women and articles of a salacious nature from the students of the public schools of Gettysburg, Burgess C. A. Heiges has issued warnings to newsdealers that if certain publications, containing stories and pictures of this nature, are not kept off their stands he will take legal action to bar their sale.

Burgess Heiges ordered one magazine dealer to remove three publications which were being offered for sale after complaints had reached him that students at the high school had been buying these magazines and that objections had been raised by both teachers and parents against the type of stories contained in them. A maximum penalty of $500 fine or a year in prison or both can be imposed in case of a conviction for the sale of magazines of this type.

The publications to which Burgess Heiges took exception are "Artists' Models," "Art and Beauty" and "Charlie Chaplin's Divorce Suit (Uncensored)." Mr. Heiges stated that it had been reported to him from reliable sources that the matter printed in the last named publication was of a decidedly risqué nature and that, according to reports, a number of copies of the publication had been sold to high school students. In the other two magazines, Burgess Heiges stated that pictures of nude women were printed and that some of the stories in them were questionable.

The magazine dealer upon whose stand the publications were found readily agreed to withdraw them from sale and to discontinue handling them.

It was stated by Burgess Heiges that a number of other so-called magazines which are on sale here have been reported to him as containing articles that are of a decidedly questionable nature and he will bar them from sale also as soon as they can be located.

The drive against magazines of this type, Burgess Heiges pointed out, is being carried on in order that the children of Gettysburg will not be given the opportunity to read material which is likely to do them moral harm.

TENNANT GETS ORIOLE CONTRACT

Local Player Is Expected to Go South With Team in March; Likely to be Regular.

"Jim" Tennant, Chambersburg street, former Gettysburg High School pitching ace, who last year joined the Baltimore club in the International league, today received a contract from Manager Jack Dunn, of that team, to sign up for the coming season.

Although Tennant spent the greater part of last season on the bench, and was used only as a relief hurler for the Orioles, Manager Dunn has offered him an increase in salary for this season. Last year, Tennant is reported to have been receiving $300 a month.

Dunn is said to recognize considerable pitching talent in Tennant which can be brought out through careful handling. It is expected Dunn will use Tennant as a regular hurler this year.

Tennant is said to view the contract favorably, and is expected to affix his signature within a few days, returning it to the Oriole manager. He will report next month for spring training with the Orioles in Florida.

The pitcher had attended Mt. St. Mary's College, Emmitsburg, for a while this winter, but recently has been at home playing basketball with the Majestic Club team in the Gettysburg league.

FOUR FINED FOR ALLOWING DOGS TO RUN AT LARGE

County Residents Report Loss of Chickens From Dogs; Will Continue Campaign.

Four of the five alleged violators of the state dog laws appeared before Justice J. U. Appler, Thursday evening, and paid fines of $5 each. Costs in each action were $3. Those who paid fines were Max Foth, Paul Martin, Harry Bumbaugh and Charles W. Cook.

The case of Matt Fields, who claimed that his dog, although unlicensed, had not been allowed off the premises and was always in the custody of some responsible person, was held over until today by Justice Appler.

All four of the defendants were found guilty at the hearing and all paid the fines and costs.

Dogs Must Wear Tags

In connection with the local roundup of unlicensed dogs and dogs running at large without their owners or some other responsible person, G. A. Raffensperger, Straban township, field agent for the state department of agriculture, called attention to the recent decision of the state supreme court in upholding the law which provides that all dogs must wear tags.

An appeal from a summary conviction, similar to the local cases, was taken by R. C. Haldeman, of Harrisburg, after Mr. Raffensperger had arrested him for having several unlicensed dogs on his premises in Cumberland county.

At a hearing before Justice of the Peace Coble in Wormleysburg, Cumberland county, Haldeman was found guilty and fined $5.00 and costs. Haldeman appealed the case to the court of quarter sessions of Cumberland county, contending that the dog law was unconstitutional for nine different reasons. The case was argued before the court and on February 13, 1926, Judge E. M. Bidle, Jr., handed down his decision upholding the constitutionality of the law.

Decision Important

Mr. Haldeman immediately entered an appeal from the decision of the Cumberland county court to the superior court of Pennsylvania which sustained the decision of the lower court. Again the case was appealed—this time to the supreme court of the state from which came the recent decision which should settle for all times and all persons the constitutionality of the dog law.

The decision is extremely important since it settles once for all the question of the necessity of dog owners in Pennsylvania having license tags displayed on the collars of their dogs. Without tags being thus displayed, it would be impossible to enforce the law.

Many chickens are reported being killed by stray dogs in McSherrystown and vicinity, and Mr. Raffensperger said he planned to go into that section of Adams county within a few days. The enforcement agent later will roundup violators of the dog law in Franklin and Fulton counties, having already cleaned up a large number in Cumberland county.

Coolidge's Plan to Discuss Question to be Accepted; Conference to Decide Limitations.

(By The Associated Press)

Washington, Feb. 11.—President Coolidge's proposal for further limitation of naval armament appears to have found the maritime powers in a receptive mood.

First impressions as reflected in news dispatches from abroad indicate that the president's plan to discuss the question next month at Geneva probably will be accepted, but that specific methods of limitation will have to be left for determination by the conference itself.

Responsible officials of both the British and Japanese governments are quoted as agreeable to a discussion of the subject broached by the president, but not certain that his suggestion for extension of the 5-5-3 ratio to all classes of war craft can be accepted in advance.

300 KILLED IN LISBON REVOLT

Lisbon, Portugal, Feb. 11.—About 300 persons were killed in the insurrection in Lisbon. The revolt ended Wednesday night after fifty-six hours of fighting when government artillery swept the insurgents from their stronghold in the naval arsenal. Many were wounded. One of those killed was Col. Mendes Reis, the revolutionary leader.

President Carmona, the dictator and war minister, arrived Wednesday night with 1,600 men from Oporto and led the troops which won the government's victory here as they did at Oporto, where the revolt first started a week ago.

Lisbon had been in a state of siege since Monday. Street traffic was restored only an hour before this dispatch was filed at 10 a. m. The telegraph office is still closed to the public. This message was written inside the telegraph building.

The revolutionary troops were part of the marine forces, three companies of Republican guards, a section of the police and numerous groups of armed civilians. Some of the Lisbon streets and a number of houses were ruined by shell fire.

MERCER B. TATE DIES THURSDAY

Mercer B. Tate, 58 years old, retired contractor and prominent in Masonic and civic affairs, died at 4:05 o'clock Thursday afternoon at his home in Harrisburg. He had been confined to his bed for the last six weeks from a general physical breakdown.

He was a thirty-second degree Mason; Past Potentate of Zumbo Temple; Past Master of Harrisburg Lodge, No. 629; a member of Perseverance Chapter and Council, Pilgrim Commandery; the University Club and the Chamber of Commerce.

His interest in sports, after experience on the Lehigh football team, took an active form when he, with W. Harry Baker, William Tunis, John Black, John A. Marshall and John Fritchey, organized the Tri-State Baseball team which represented the league in Harrisburg for about eight years and later brought International league baseball to the island for a season and a half.

Superintendent Of Carlisle Schools Dies

Prof. John C. Wagner, 55 years old, superintendent of the schools of Carlisle for twenty-three years, died Thursday in Philadelphia. Professor Wagner had been a patient in the Methodist Hospital at Philadelphia since January 15.

Although a schoolman since early in his life when he taught rural schools in Perry county where he was born, Professor Wagner was active not only in school work but in the civic affairs of Carlisle. He held many important positions in directing community affairs.

AMUSEMENTS

"THE DEVIL HORSE"

Six western states were covered by Fred Wood Jackman, director of Hal Roach's feature productions, starring Rex, the king of wild horses, in an attempt to find the perfect location for the new Rex vehicle, "The Devil Horse," showing at the Strand Theatre, Friday and Saturday. Jackman drove through Idaho, Wyoming, Montana, Utah, Nevada, and South Dakota, visiting all Indian reservations in those states. Scenic possibilities and Indian reservation atmosphere were the particular objects of his search.

Meanwhile, at the Roach studios preparations were going on for the making of the production, and when Jackman and his locations in Montana and Wyoming a company was all ready to leave for several months to make the picture.

Jackman took his time at the start of production because Lady, leading woman for Rex on the screen and his mate in private life, was awaiting the approach of the stork. The heir of Rex appears in the picture, written into the final construction of the scenario for the fade-out scenes.

ANTI-EVOLUTION BILL IS KILLED IN ARKANSAS

Little Rock, Ark., Feb. 11.—The Rotenberry anti-evolution bill, which would have prohibited the teaching of evolution in tax-supported schools of Arkansas, is dead so far as this session of the Legislature goes. The Senate killed it yesterday when it voted to table the bill, which was passed by the House after a dramatic session Wednesday.

While no record vote was taken in the Senate, the bill was tabled by an estimated count of 25 to 6. It passed the House, after two representatives changed their votes from no to aye, 50 to 47.

Senator Richardson, of Hoxie, gave notice he would ask for reconsideration of the Senate action, but Lieutenant-Governor Parnell ruled this out of order as there was no record vote taken—thus no official way of knowing how Senator Richardson voted.

The bill would have prohibited the teaching in a tax-supported school the theory that "man descended or ascended from a lower order of animals."

HIGH TO PLAY LANCASTER QUINT

Maroon and White to Meet Red Roses Saturday Night on Latter's Floor.

For the first time since the opening of the season, the Maroon and White quintet will play on a foreign floor on Saturday night. The locals will journey to Lancaster to do battle with Coach Madison's men tomorrow night.

Coach Martin has been working hard to whip his team into shape for this game. Each night the team has been sent through long workouts. Signal practice, scrimmage and foul shooting consisted of most of the practices.

The high team is confident it can score a victory over Lancaster's quintet and a lively battle can be looked for. After their decisive victory over York the locals are expected to again flash good form. The Maroon and White played a whirlwind game in the York contest and if they can repeat tomorrow the Lancaster five should be easy. However the Lancaster boys are a great team on their own court and a real battle will be fought.

Coach Martin will probably start his customary lineup. Captain Buohl and Joe Sadler will be at the forward positions. Charley Lightner will do the jumping act. Trostle and Bream will probably be at the guard posts. This combination has been working well in the last few games and should give a good account of themselves in the coming tussle.

Some interesting games are scheduled for tonight. Sunbury High and Lebanon should have a thrilling game but Lebanon is given the odds on a victory. Lancaster and York will engage in the Battle of the Roses at York. This will be another hard fought game but the Weimermen are the favorites. Williamsport should be easy winner over William Penn.

Saturday's layout also presents some good games. The winner of the High-Lancaster tilt is a toss up. Williamsport looks like another easy winner. The league leading Steelton quintet should experience little trouble from the lowly Lebanon tossers. Reading and William Penn should stage a merry battle but the Harrisburg lads are favored to win.

"TRACKED BY THE POLICE," starring Rin-Tin-Tin, is a Warner Bros. production of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

When, in the course of a dangerous raid in France, a German war dog gives her life to save his, Jimmy Ford, an American doughboy, gratefully adopts her puppy. He and his mate name their new mascot Rin-Tin-Tin. He smuggles Rin-Tin-Tin home after the war. Murtagh, a politician, covets Jimmy's sweetheart, Ruth Allen; Murtagh is secretly in league with a notorious gang. Jimmy's father, a police lieutenant, is mysteriously murdered. Jimmy joins the force, vowing to avenge the slayer and to exact vengeance. Jimmy has an ability in Rin-Tin-Tin, now full-grown, he encounters Murtagh.

Only at the expense of a determined biting of his tongue did Jimmy manage to hold those words back from blurring through his trembling lips. However, among the several tricks of warfare that Jimmy retained as a legacy of his mud-bound days in the Argonne was the truism that to fight an entrenched enemy from an open position was sheer suicide.

"Keep your head down, Fritzle boy!" was the advice that had worked both ways—for the doughboy as well as for the Fritzle. And for Jimmy Ford now in the peace time fights of his workaday loves and hates in New York city. Murtagh was strongly entrenched in political favoritism, in money, in prestige. Jimmy was by comparison in a defenseless and exposed position—a young cop, without influence other than the halo of his father's reputation; without money other than the meagre account in the Chelsea Bank toward his wedding day; without prestige, because he had as yet had no chance to win his spurs, to prove his mettle.

Jimmy knew full well that Murtagh was his enemy; even though he had been wanting any other evidence, Rinty's striking aversion for the slick ward heeler would have been enough. Rinty's marvelous instinct was infallible on questions of human honesty and character.

"Like all police dogs he's a one man dog."

But also within Jimmy was an inner warning voice that corroborated Rinty's very evident loathing of the man. Furthermore, there was a memory of Ford senior's remark that he had recognized in Murtagh a secret, abetting agent of underworld evil.

Bluntly, Jimmy suspected that the murder of his father could be attributed directly to Murtagh; but, being a professional enforcer of the law, he knew that men could not be sent to the chair on suspicion alone. There must be proof to substantiate the suspicion. To the getting of that proof Jimmy concentrated and physical and mental resources. To "get the goods," as they said in the central office, on Murtagh would require patient, skillful and cunning work.

Of course the hardest immediate thing about Murtagh to bear was his all too obvious hanging after Ruth Allen. While Ruthie had often reassured Jimmy that his fears and jealousies of Murtagh were groundless, that she was plenty confident of her ability to take care of herself come what may, and that she refused to take Murtagh seriously except as a kindly friend who had been good to her father without apparent ulterior motives, Jimmy knew as well as anything that it was not the way of Murtagh's sort to be "good" to any nice girl except as an eroding campaign toward a base end.

For all these manifold considerations which raced through his mind in the brief instant when his flashing eyes struck fire on Murtagh's flinty gaze, Jimmy restrained the words that watered on his lips; held back the nervous fist that ached to clench against the fat pads of Murtagh's cheekbones. To dissemble his own hot emotions was comparatively easy, but to bring Rinty's frank and straightforward show of hatred to an end required no little amount of soothing and cajoling. This was strange and unprecedented, too, for Rinty as a rule was a well behaved workman who heeded the admonitions of his master instantly. It was with extreme reluctance that the big dog was finally persuaded to give over his bridling and snarling.

"Good morning, Mr. Murtagh," smiled Jimmy in his most diplomatically civil manner after a severe effort. "Sure and don't mind Rinty. Like all good police dogs, he's a one man dog. Of what use would he be otherwise? You see, he's trained to be distant and unapproachable like. Why, he even growls at Captain O'Brien himself, just as he did at you."

Indeed, this explanation only served to make him declare with acidity: "Well, if I was the captain I'd tie him out in the station courtyard and let the cops use him for target practice—and not with blank cartridges either."

Was it Rinty's hostility or was it the mocking light just barely perceptible behind Jimmy's steady gaze that made Murtagh feel so uncomfortable? Which ever, it hastened his entrance into the brownstone old-time house wherein the Allens dwelt, and the period to his vindictive sentence, concerning his ideas of what should be done to Rinty was formed by the slamming of the door behind him.

Whereupon Jimmy looked at Rinty and Rinty looked at Jimmy. And anyone with half an eye could see that the big dog's grin was just as wide and just as sophisticated as that on the face of the bluecoated master, beside whom he was now hastening down Twenty-second street in the direction of the precinct station house.

Meanwhile upstairs in the Allen skylight flat, odorous with the scorch of breakfast, James Allen fretted over a poised forkful of fried eggs.

"I'm not saying anything against Jimmy Ford personally, you understand, Ruth, but you're a mighty foolish girl to take on with a mere pavement pounding cop when the biggest man in the ward is sweet on you."

"The biggest man in the ward, to my way of thinking, is that same Jimmy Ford!" retorted Ruth calmly, yet stoutly. "Besides, you're wrong, I'm sure, about Mr. Murtagh's feelings toward me, because—"

"No-o-o-o, I'm not," cut in the father, eagerly, yet hesitantly. "You see, err-r-r, he asked me to sort of—feel things out for him. See, that is, how he stood with you—"

Ruth was both dumbfounded and indignant. "Who does he think you are, John Allen? He's too fat to be Miles Standish! If I had ever dreamt for a moment that he thought of me in that way I'd have frozen him away from here long ago. Why, I wouldn't marry Dan Murtagh if he was the last man on earth!"

"Ruth, you mustn't talk that way. Mr. Murtagh has been good to us—" to me. When times were bad during the war and I didn't have no job he got me work. And now he's setting me a better job. I tell you, Ruthie, he's a fine man, and if you want to make your old father's heart glad and give him a chance to show his appreciation you'd only be too glad to make it possible for Dan Murtagh to be my son-in-law. What a proud day 'twould be for James Allen!"

"I'm sorry, father, but you'll have to find something else to be proud of. I'm mighty grateful to Mr. Murtagh for what he's done for you, and for his kindnesses to me, but as between him and Jimmy it ain't even close enough to be exciting!"

A knock—an oily, subdued, bland knocking. Come in—COME IN—come in—

Dan Murtagh himself, smiling from the violate threshold at resentful Ruth, at humble, disappointed James Allen. Murtagh, with an inscrutable Oriental remoteness in his eyes that kept the startled and embarrassed Ruth in doubt as to whether or not he had heard her threat.

"A fine reception I got here this morning!" greeted Murtagh, his eyes narrowing ever so slightly as he watched the effect of this studied and subtle remark upon Ruth.

Subtle it was, indeed—and well it served the furtive purpose in Murtagh's cagey mind—for it made Ruth feel that he must have overheard her. She faltered, her face crimson. "Why—why—I don't know what you mean, Mr. Murtagh."

"Downstairs, I mean. Not up here, of course. You are always sweetness itself personified—always so glad to see me," grinned Murtagh, his eyes narrowing still another fraction.

Protected heretofore by her unsuspicion of any purpose in his attentions, Ruth now felt herself suddenly self-conscious and ill at ease under his dark eyes. She experienced a slight shiver, as if his gaze were a cold, leprous thing of slime, that saw right through her clothing and crawled on the hot, naked skin of her innocent young body.

BULLETS ROMP OVER W. M. 36-23

Gettysburg College stopped its losing streak last night by turning the tables on Western Maryland College by the score 36-23. Coach Leathers' men swung into the lead at the start and were never headed. The Marylanders pushed the locals the entire route and managed to keep in the running.

The game was rough and hard fought. Numerous fouls marred the game somewhat. The Orange and Blue team hopped into the lead at the start. Peduzzi ripped the cords soon after the opening of the game. In the waning minutes of the half Shultz and Peduzzi broke loose and scored goals in rapid succession. At half time the Orange and Blue led, 23-13.

Western Maryland staged a rally at the start of the second half, but it was short lived. Machamer and Broll succeeded in landing shots, but Peduzzi and Spangler duplicated. Gettysburg managed to maintain its ten point lead throughout the entire half. Western Maryland failed to threaten during the latter part of the game.

Peduzzi and Shultz were the highlights for the Leathersmen. Peduzzi caged six double deuckers while Shultz looped 5 goals and two fouls. Machamer with three goals and Broll with four baskets and four fouls led the attack of the southerners.

SLEEP ALL NIGHT NOW

Says Pennsylvania Man, Not Bothered by Bladder Weakness at Night.

A. C. Smith, 41 W. Broad St., Bethlehem, Pa., says, "I now rise in the morning refreshed and feeling fine. Will gladly tell my experience by words or letter. Getting up nights for bladder relief is nature's warning of danger ahead. Lithiated Buchu cleanses the bladder as opium salts do the bowels, driving out abnormal deposits, neutralizes excessive acids, thereby relieving the irritation which causes getting up nights. The tablets cost 2 cents each at all drug stores. Keller Laboratory, Mechanicsburg, O. Locally at People's Drug Store.—adv.

CANNOT PRAISE IT TOO HIGHLY

"Since this wonderful Dreco has made me well I cannot praise it too highly," declares Mrs. Ida M. Sauerwald, R. D. No. 8, York, Pa. "I can now eat fried foods and greasy foods without the least distress in my stomach afterwards, and the dizzy spells, pains in my neck and limbs, constipation and headaches have also been relieved."

This remarkable remedy made from the old reliable roots and herbs quickly ends all forms of indigestion, regulates the liver and bowels, increases the appetite, soothes tired frazzled nerves and rebuilds weak, worn-out bodies. It is without a peer for cleansing the system of the poisons which cause rheumatism and catarrh.

H. B. Bender & Son
Funeral Directors,
Gettysburg

Now, let me think a minute or three.
Didn't I promise to tell my Little Jack Rabbit Fans where Mrs. Beaver keeps the comb with which she unsnarls a tangle in her hairy coat? Of course I did. Well, she carries it on one of her hind toes. Yes, she does. It is a peculiar split claw on one of her hind toes. Very useful as a comb, and as every beaver takes good care of his furry coat, keeping it scrupulously clean, and his winter house as well, many of us humans can gain a good lesson from these little people, the most inoffensive woodland folk your Uncle Dave has ever known. Busy Beaver never meddles with any one's business. He and his family live by themselves, apart from other animals of the forest, making a holiday of the summer time, wandering up and down the wooded streams until the cool nights of approaching autumn warn them to get busy and provide winter quarters that will keep them safely housed from Mr. Wicked Wolf and Mrs. Wildcat, who gladly eat beaver meat when they have a rare chance.
Aside from these two enemies they live unmolested, except when hunted by man.

"Gracious me," sighed Mrs. Beaver.
"My hair is certainly full of snarls.
But as perhaps I shan't have another opportunity to come up here and sit out in the open, I must make my fur coat look presentable," and glancing now and again, and sometimes oftener, over her shoulder for fear of being caught unawares in the open, she went on with her toilet. By and by Busy Beaver's head appeared above the water, and in a few minutes he was beside her with a tender yellow lily root in his mouth.

"There, I've brought you a sweet morsel," he laughed, setting the lily root down beside her. "Poplar bark is mighty good bread and butter, but give me lily roots for a change. One grows tired of the same old thing morning, noon and night."
"I hope we have built our house high enough," sighed Mrs. Beaver, at last smoothing out the last snarl. "An unusually big freshet in the spring might drown us all."
"Don't worry," answered Busy Beaver. "Before we built our dam I was mighty careful to note the marks left by last year's high water. I'm sure our cabin is built high enough to keep us dry no matter how swollen the Bubbling Brook becomes in the spring."

"We must bring the children here tomorrow," went on Mrs. Beaver, as she commenced to eat the lily root.
"They need the sunlight. How they would enjoy playing in the open water." But, goodness me. She had hardly finished speaking when a slight noise made them both dive into the water. Slapping the water with their broad tails as a danger signal, they both went down out of sight and swam swiftly homeward under the ice to their cabin.

"Botheration!" snarled Mrs. Wildcat, peering out from behind a bush.
"That dry twig I stepped on by mistake frightened them. Now I suppose I have lost a good dinner," and coming out from her hiding place, she followed the short until she reached the beavers' cabin. Scrambling up on the roof, she held her nose close to the hole in the roof and sniffed the air, and as the beaver scent filled her nostrils, she commenced to tear away at the roof with her sharp claws. The next minute her quick ear heard the plump! plump! plump of little beavers one after another dropping into their tunnel.

"Botheration!" again snarled the old wildcat. "They've all left. Swimming about under the ice, I suppose."
But Mrs. Wildcat's surmise was wrong. The Beaver family had hurried to the refuge burrows which they had hollowed out in the bank in the autumn while building their winter quarters. Wise little beavers. They do not depend on one place for safety, but on several; all of which are reached by under-ground tunnels leading down, far down, below the surface of the pond. And in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

Some Facts About

BASKETBALLS

You Did Not Know That

WILSON basketballs are used in more inter-scholastic and inter-collegiate contests than all other makes combined.

They have again been adopted for the Chicago National Inter-Scholastic meet.

They are double fabric lined insuring a durable permanent shape.

They will outlast three unlined balls.

After three years of hard use they are still round.

They cannot burst the seams.

These facts give this ball undisputed claim to premier honors among basketballs and undoubtedly means a better game.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE EVERYWHERE

IF we fulfil our real mission on this earth, we are none of us the mere inhabitants of a town, or community, or country—we are citizens of The Everywhere.

So that our friend and neighbor is he who can feel us, be he a few paces from our door, or a thousand miles away. Or, even, at the other side of the globe.

The Everywhere is the playground of the mind, where human beings ramp, and where the fingers of character reach that they may perform in useful service, and add glory to influence.

Whenever you perform any act of pure unselfishness, that act becomes the heritage of all mankind. The Everywhere closes in upon you and makes you its debtor.

But we must be made fit for this sacred area. No little mind can breathe its air. None but the brave and patient and tolerant can fully understand and feel at home in The Everywhere.

After President Lincoln was shot in Ford's Theatre, Washington, an entire Nation was plunged into grief. He became the stricken leader of a great Nation. But after he had breathed his last, Secretary Stanton looked up from the lifeless form and exclaimed: "Now he belongs to the world!"

We are all our brother's keeper in The Everywhere.

If there was a League of Hearts in this world, there would be no room, nor would there be any occasion, for a League of Nations.

The terrible World War came about because a handful of nations, fairly running into each other, didn't understand each other, didn't talk the same language. Each was a foreigner to the other, instead of neighbor.

If you want to feel very proud and happy, become a citizen of The Everywhere—and do something notable to deserve it.

AMUSEMENTS

Graham Stock Company
The Graham Stock Company will open a four day engagement at the Majestic Theatre, commencing Monday, February 14, presenting an excellent line of late released Broadway plays, affording the Gettysburg public an opportunity of witnessing metropolitan successes for the first time at popular prices. The opening production will be "Cheating Husbands," a three act comedy by Max Marcino, author of "Cheating Cheaters." Both of these comedies had long runs on Broadway, and as laughing vehicles the author created the brightest witty dialogue and tense situations that will keep you in an uproar throughout the play.

In connection with the plays produced, high class vaudeville will be introduced between the acts at every performance. In addition to the entire stage production, the usual run of feature movies will be given. Special matinee for ladies only will be given on Thursday. The picture starts nightly at 7 o'clock and the stage show at 8:15 o'clock.
